

Special programmes for newly arrived children and young people

There are special school classes and programmes focusing on the German language to make it easier for newly arrived children and young people to start school.

💡 If you live in the AnKER centre in Zirndorf (asylum seekers), children and young people are required to attend school 3 months after registration. In the meantime, there is a voluntary teaching programme on site. The refugee and integration counselling service can help with school registration.

Primary and secondary schools

There are German classes at primary and secondary schools for pupils who still need to learn more German. They are first enrolled at the school. This is done by the school authority. The Sprengelschule then looks for a primary or secondary school with German classes via the education authority. This happens very quickly. Some schools also offer additional programmes to improve language skills.

Secondary school

Entry to secondary school: The "SPRINT" ("intensive language support") programme is for children and young people from Year 5 in German classes. The education authority, together with the secondary school, can select children who could make it to secondary school. This is checked. If everything goes well, the children can go on to the 6th or 7th grade of secondary school.

There is a SPRINT class at the Leopold-Ullstein-Realschule in the city of Fürth. It is also open to pupils from the district of Fürth:

Grammar school

The "InGym" programme is available for particularly gifted and talented schoolchildren up to the age of 15. This is a six-month German course at grammar school. After that, the child can go to grammar school. Enrolment takes place via a grammar school in your area. The grammar school accepts your child as a guest pupil. Your child will then go to the Martin-Behaim-Gymnasium in Nuremberg for six months, where the "InGym" course takes place.

Integration preliminary class at the FOS

From the school year 24/25, the Max Grundig School will be offering an integration preparatory class. The class is especially for students who have only recently arrived in Germany and would like to attend the FOS in order to obtain their Fachabitur or Abitur.

PREREQUISITES FOR ENROLLMENT: You have been in Germany for a maximum of four years - You have German language skills at least at A2 or B1 level - You have English language skills at A2 level. The integration preliminary class prepares you for the specialised secondary school in one year.

In addition, the secondary school leaving certificate can be obtained directly at the FOS. You can register for the class immediately. You have to go to the FOS in person.
