Residenzpflicht

Residenzpflicht (residence obligation)/ spatial restriction

Who is subject to the residence obligation and for how long?

If you have applied for asylum as an asylum seeker, you are initially restricted to the (city or rural) district of the foreigners authority in which you live.

foreigners authority in which the reception centre responsible for you is located. The spatial restriction is also called the residence obligation.

The spatial restriction expires if you stay in Germany for longer than three months on a permitted, tolerated or authorised basis, unless you are are still obliged to live in the reception centre responsible for taking him or her in.

It may happen that persons from so-called safe countries of origin or with little prospect of remaining are subject to a residence obligation until the decision of the asylum application are subject to a residence obligation.

If their asylum application is rejected as "manifestly unfounded", the residence obligation even applies until you leave the country.

Am I allowed to leave the designated area for appointments, travel, visits?

This restriction does not apply to appointments with authorities and courts. For other occasions, you must obtain permission from the competent foreigners authority (e.g. visiting the sick, visiting refugee organisations, weddings, deaths, etc.).

Note: When obtaining permission, a written invitation from the person you wish to visit may help.

Note: If you leave the area of your spatial restriction in without permission, you may face fines. If the offence is repeated you can even face a prison sentence of up to one year.

Residence restriction

A residence restriction means that you have to live in a certain place and/or a certain flat/community accommodation.

You are not allowed to simply move, but must submit an application.

For whom and for how long does the residence requirement apply?

A distinction is made between the following residence requirements

- § Section 12a of the Residence Act for persons entitled to asylum, refugees within the meaning of Section 3 (1) of the Asylum Act or persons entitled to subsidiary protection within the meaning of Section 4 (1) of the Asylum Act or persons with a ban on deportation.
- § Section 60 (1d) for tolerated persons
- § Section 60 (1) Asylum Act for asylum seekers
- § 24 Residence Act

Overall, it can be said that the following persons have a residence requirement:

- Asylum seekers/ persons with a residence permit
- Persons with recognised protection status (refugee status, subsidiary protection status or deportation bans), insofar as the foreigners authority has imposed a residence requirement when issuing the residence permit.
- Tolerated persons / persons with toleration who are unable to secure their livelihood independently
- War refugees from the Ukraine

Is it possible to move for the job?

In the case of the persons named in § 12a of the Residence Act and § 24 of the Residence Act, the residence requirement will be lifted if you can prove that you will be able to

- start vocational training/studies
- you can take up employment subject to social insurance contributions and
- the probable permanent job is at an unreasonable distance from your previous place of residence:

It is possible to apply for the removal of the residence requirement for both temporary and permanent employment.

However, please note the following:

- The employment must be expected to last longer than three months
- The weekly working hours must be at least 15 hours
- The net income must be above the SGB II rate for standard needs, accommodation and heating.

Application to change the residence requirement for tolerated persons/ cancellation of the residence requirement for asylum seekers/refugees:

You must submit the application for cancellation or change of the residence requirement or reallocation to the foreigners authority of your current place of residence.

The foreigners authority at the destination of the move must agree.

You will need the following documents:

- Application
- Copy of employment contract/training contract or written confirmation of employment (probationary period must be over)
- Copies of the last three pay slips
- In the case of communal residents, a certificate from the communal administration stating that there are no rent arrears or outstanding debts there

Rental contract for the flat (with ancillary costs) or certificate from the landlord stating the total costs of the proposed new flat.

Important: Do not sign the tenancy agreement until the foreigners authority at your destination has approved the move.

You can find more information on this under Asylum and Refugee Protection.
