Vocational guidance at the Employment Agency

All pupils, trainees, students and graduates of universities and colleges can get advice. In addition, anyone who is seeking vocational training for the first time or who wants to reorientate themselves professionally.

Career counselling helps, for example, to

- find the right profession or the right course of study,
- clarify questions about the content of an apprenticeship or course of study,
- find a training place
- apply for a job in the right way
- develop alternatives if the desired occupation does not work out,
- make use of funding opportunities,
- get information on the training or labour market.

Training Consultation

The training consultation can answer questions such as: How does dual training work? Who helps in the search for a training position or a suitable training company?

The KAUSA service center is the local contact. They advise and inform self-employed people, young people and parents with a migration background as well as young refugees on all aspects of vocational training.
