Munich's railway stations / ZOB / airport

Munich Central Station

The main railway station is located in the centre of the city. It has 32 above-ground and several underground tracks. It has the most main tracks of any German railway station. All long-distance trains depart from the main concourse. Tracks 5 to 10 - the so-called Holzkirchen station - are mostly used by regional trains travelling to Salzburg and Mühldorf. From tracks 27 to 36 - the so-called Starnberg station - trains depart for Lindau, Lenggries or Tegernsee. Around 350,000 people use the main station every day. There is also a customer centre for local public transport, shopping facilities and snack bars.

Munich's Ostbahnhof railway station

The Ostbahnhof is located in the Haidhausen district. Ostbahnhof is another long-distance railway station and an important transfer point between regional trains as well as S-Bahn and U-Bahn trains. The ExpressBus X30 also stops there and offers a good connection to Giesing and Sendling. There is also a wide range of restaurants, bars and clubs in the immediate vicinity.

Munich-Pasing railway station

This station has 14 tracks and is also a long-distance railway station. Around 85,000 people use it every day.

Munich Central Bus Station (ZOB)

This is a railway station for bus connections. It is an important transport hub for national and international connections from Munich. With 29 bus terminals and many sales areas, the ZOB has an airport-like character.

Munich Airport

You can take the S-Bahn lines 1 and 8 to the airport and the visitor park. You should allow around 40 minutes for the S-Bahn journey to reach the airport on time.

It is also possible to use the Lufthansa Airport Bus. It departs from the stops Hauptbahnhof (about 45 minutes journey time) and Schwabing Nord / Nordfriedhof (about 30 minutes journey time). However, there may be delays depending on the volume of traffic. Further information can be found at here. MVV tickets are not valid here.

If you want to travel by car, you can also use a car-sharing vehicle to the airport.
